The case has just been tried in the Superior Court, and the jury gave Kent a verdict of $44 damages against White. The police are not a little puzzled by the verdict, and wonder how they are to proceed if an action, with damages, is to follow an arrest under the city ordinances.

The matter is one of some little importance to municipal authorities elsewhere, for Judge Matthows decided that the ordinance under which the arrest was made was totally void, and that the City Council had no power to make a regulation, providing that no goods of any description shall be sold at auction on the street.
